sociology 101 is an introduction to the basic concepts and frames of reference of sociological investigation and interpretation. Topics will include the basics of sociological theory, culture, and socialization. The primary objective of the class is to introduce you to the discipline of sociology. What I want to show you is that sociology is a tool that will enable you to better understand and think critically about the world around you. Sociology is about using sociological concepts to analyze social situations and make sense of them.

The course will cover topics such as socialization, group dynamics, gender roles, structural inequality, race and ethnicity, social stratification, deviance, and population studies. The course syllabus is subject to change, so please refer to the official course information for the most up-to-date details.

This is a 7.5-week, three-credit course. The lectures will take place on campus on certain days, and the balance of the instruction will occur online. Please refer to the course syllabus for more information.
