The initials stand for attention, interest, desire, and action, and if you follow these 4 steps when constructing your letter, you'll find it much easier to write a letter that gets results. For commercial purposes, persuasive writing can be used to gain the attention of the audience about a certain product or service. Tips for persuasive writing for your convenience. This article provides writing examples in doc format, but if you want to write your own, here are some tips to consider:

- Present unbiased opinions
- A persuasive letter is a formal letter and thus its format is similar to any such letter. However, the content can differ drastically as it caters to a whole range of readers. Also, while formal letters are short and crisp, persuasive letters have the liberty to be slightly longer.
- Structure your points properly. Follow a specific order to present your points. This can start from the simplest to the most compelling of all. This will help you formulate a persuasive essay with a logical argument. You may also see effective ways and examples to start your essay.
- Best ideas for persuasive essays:
  - An example of a persuasive letter to a head teacher followed by a box plan to enable children to plan their own version.
  - Now that you've captivated the reader's interest, introduce the major selling point or benefit.
  - Present the company and product/service as a benefit or solution. Don't just list the features; tell how the reader can benefit from them.
  - What is the specific appeal for the company? How?

Persuasive messages have a tendency to utilize the indirect approach.
