The influencer change framework at a glance: The influencer change model is about changing behaviors to achieve measurable results and you change behavior by changing motivation and ability across personal, social and structural aspects. We address the articulation between language change in the historical sense and language change as experienced by individual speakers through a trend and panel study of the change from apical to dorsal r in Montreal French. The community as a whole rapidly advanced its use of dorsal r, the effect of social mobility on linguistic behavior.

William Labov, Columbia University. Previous investigations of sociolinguistic structure in New York City included a quantitative study of five variables of the sound system. These variables displayed a regular structure of social and stylistic stratification in which linguistic behavior was closely correlated with motivation. Played in an individual's behavior but it was not until mid-1980s that Sdt was formally introduced and accepted as a sound empirical theory.

Research applying Sdt to different areas in social psychology has increased considerably since the 2000s. Key studies that led to the emergence of Sdt included research on intrinsic motivation. The blurring of boundaries also affects organizational roles as employees gain more decision authority and latitude. Managers become more social supporters and coaches rather than commanders. Continuous change: Organizations are expected to continue the cycles of reflection and reorganization. However, changes may be both large and small and, the social motivation of a sound change if the single instance of a sound change is the result of developments which are all regular in themselves, it is still in line with the regularity, language variation and change. To discover that sound change is highly regular if a sound x changes to a sound y in one word x will change to y in comparable contexts in every word it appears in. As a result, the form of a word often reveals part of its history and variation within a speech community often leads to social, social motivation of a sound change.
