Write the equation of a line in slope intercept form that
April 24th, 2019 - The equation may be y = x + 9. You get the slope by substituting y1 = y2 and x1 = x2, then you truly plug between the factors into the incomplete equation 12 = 3b even as b is the y intercept then you truly sparkling up 12 = 3 9 and considering the fact that 12 is they and three is the b the equation is y = x + 9. And convinced the slope is a million.

April 20th, 2019 - Best Answer. Ok so slope intercept form is always in this form \( y = mx + b \) so for number 1, 5x + 10 drag the 5x to the other side so you would have to make it negative then you have 5x = 10 that's number one. D number two, \( y = 4x + 8 \) you want to drag the 4x over to the other side like last.

April 18th, 2019 - Best Answer. For both of these problems, you must isolate \( y \). To do so you must first subtract the \( x \) coefficient from each side. It should look like \( 2y = 28 \) \( 7x + 8y = 48 \) \( 3x \). In order to put it into the correct slope intercept format, you must switch the \( x \) coefficient and \( b \) places to look like \( 2y \).
