Soc 399 Social Movements
Social movements are large groups of people who are organized to promote or resist some social change. A social movement is typically based upon two factors: first, whom the movement represents, and second, such a sociology should advance a unifying vision for these movements. A vision so badly needed. Four elements are common in social science definitions of social movements: a network structure, the use of unconventional means, shared beliefs and solidarity, and the pursuit of some conflictual aims. Once a marginal area in the social sciences, social movement studies grew into a main field of research.
